

The Board of Directors of the Banco de la República was established by the National Constitution as a monetary, exchange and credit authority in order to achieve the State's objective of maintaining currency purchasing power (article 373, subsection 1 of the National Constitution and Law 31, 1992, article 2).