2,000 Peso Banknote:

Five Identifying Features Tuesday, 2 November 2021 - 12:00

On 29 November 2016, Banco de la República started circulating the new $2 thousand-peso banknote, the fifth of the new family of banknotes, which will circulate simultaneously with the current one. Its predominant color is blue. The obverse features the image of artist Débora Arango, along with the leaves and the fruit of the milk tree and a cardinal bird. On the reverse, Caño Cristales, the "river of the five colors" and several birds flying over the top of a tree are highlighted. Learn about its characteristics and security elements in this video.
