

Banco de la República, NBER, and FAR join Forces to discuss Capital Flows in Emerging Markets

Banco de la República, NBER, and FAR join Forces to discuss Capital Flows in Emerging Markets

On May 9 and 10, Banco de la República (the Central Bank of Colombia) through the Economics Researchers Network, the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), and the Andean Reserve Fund (FAR) will hold the conference “Emerging and Frontier Markets: Capital Flows, Resiliency, Risks, and Growth, Spring 2022” in Cartagena.

As part of its constitutional mission of promoting knowledge and research, Banco de la República joined these renowned international organizations to analyze and discuss research on current economic matters.

This event will be attended by renowned academics and economists such as Pierre-Olivier Gourinchas from the International Monetary Fund; Maurice Obstfeld from California and Berkeley Universities, and NBER; José Darío Uribe, Chief Executive Officer of FAR; and Mauricio Villamizar, Board Member of Banco de la República.

The NBER is a private and independent economic research and analysis organization. Its research is disseminated to academics, public and private decision-makers, and the general public. Whereas the Andean Reserve Fund (FAR) is an organization that contributes to the macroeconomic and financial stability of the region by providing financial assistance to its member countries, improving the investment conditions of their international reserves, and promoting technical and academic dialogue forums.

See the complete agenda at Emerging and Frontier Markets: Capital Flows, Resiliency, Risks, and Growth | NBER