"Improved Performance of Salaried Employment and Analysis of the Colombian Labor Market in the Latin American Context", the most recent Labor Market Report
"According to the Official Colombian Household Survey (GEIH by its acronym in Spanish), as of August 2025, national employment continued to grow. This employment dynamics is mainly explained by improved performance in urban areas (annual growth of 3.0%), followed by other municipalities and rural areas (annual growth of 2.6%). By type of employment, it is observed that, during the last quarter, the segment of salaried workers was more dynamic than the non-salaried segment. By economic sectors, the main contributors to employment growth were manufacturing, commerce, and accommodation."
