Published every six months, the Regional Economic Report (RER) offers an analysis of the Colombian economy from the general perspective, trade associations, government agencies and users of economic

The RER is regional in content and covers the various geographical areas that make up the country. It is a magazine in which the topics it addresses, which are macroeconomic, sectoral, financial and research

The RER originated with an agreement between Banco de la República and DANE, which is part of the government's efforts to improve the quality of its data and to make it more accessible to the public. In addition, government agencies have become involved in this endeavor as well, and the RER is now a joint effort of the
